

UNIVERSITÀ
di VERONA

Dipartimento
di SCIENZE GIURIDICHE

The Department of Law of the University of Verona carries out and promotes teaching and research activities in subject matters pertaining to Area 12 – Law Studies (Italian National University Council). Since 2012, the Department has succeeded the Faculty of Law (already established in 1995), to which the legal scholars previously affiliated with the Faculty of Economics had moved; currently, it is composed of more than sixty faculty members representing all scientific disciplinary groups of Area 12 – Law Studies, as well as six members of the administrative staff.

The Department of Law pursues its well-established activities and promotes new fields of study and innovative research methods, content, and goals, cooperating with other academic disciplines, such as economics, history and literature, sociology, psychology, and medicine.

In particular, the Department of Law, with the support of its internal facilities:

- publishes the results of its research activities, organizes scientific conferences, meetings, and seminars, in cooperation with other Italian and international associations;
- encourages and supports the participation in national and international research projects connected to topics of its fields of study;
- promotes the development of collaborative relationships and supervises exchange scholar programs with Italian and international universities;
- in full compliance with university instructions, signs contracts and conventions with private and public institutions, aimed at performing research and consulting activities;
- participates in learning activities related to the legal fields.

Initiatives and activities

- Degree programs (bachelor's degree, master's degree, and single-cycle master's degree);
- Ph.D. program (Ph.D. in European and International Law);
- National, European and international research projects;
- Department facilities (centres and libraries).