The Winter School is an intensive one-week program taught in English aiming to provide a comprehensive comparative understanding of the different levels of justice.

It merges the fields of international law, comparative public law, European Union law, political science, and human rights. It combines theory and practice as well, as in one session the students will engage in conversations with a former Italian constitutional judge and a former Spanish and European judge from the highest jurisdictions.

The Winter School consists of one week of lectures, discussion, and dialogue with experts on justice.

It is limited to a maximum of 50 participants, with guaranteed enrollment based on the date of receipt of this application form.

The registration fee is 170,00 euro.

Attendees will be issued a certificate of attendance.
